This final Golden Rule will be short and to the point. There is no amount of technology in the world that is as important as this Golden Rule. In fact, this is THEE GOLDEN RULE. You've probably heard this rule throughout your life from parents, teachers, coaches, and just about anyone with a good natured being. For those of you so inclined, you've definitely heard this rule through the Bible.

It's simple.
Treat others how you want to be treated.

This rule isn't about simply being nice to people or helping out those in need. No, this rule is more about you as a person than you might recognize. It's about what value you put on others as people and their value to the world at large. You don't simply treat others nicely because you've been told to do so since you were a child. No, you treat people nicely because you understand that kindness gives birth to kindness.

In the end, treating others how you want to be treated isn't about making you feel good about yourself. Instead it's about making others feel good about themselves.
